What is the Tahoe-Pyramid Trail?
The Tahoe-Pyramid Trail is a 114-mile route that follows the Truckee River from its source at Lake Tahoe to its desert terminus, Pyramid Lake. Designed for foot or bicycle travel, the trail is paved in urban areas and dirt in rural areas. In 2019 the trail reached 80% completion, with the opening of the final section between Lake Tahoe and Reno.

Future Sections
• 5 miles east of Sparks has been blocked for years by landowners.
• From USA Parkway to Wadsworth is a 17-mile missing section also blocked by landowners.

Help Extend & Sustain the Tahoe-Pyramid Trail!

Donate
• Century Circle donations ($100 a year and up) keep the TPT going from year-to-year.
• RMD can be donated if you are over 72.
• TPT Endowment at the Community Foundation of Western Nevada accepts larger donations that will sustain the trail for years into the future.
• Legacy Circle is a new group of people who have included the TPT in their will or estate plan.
• Amazon Smile accesses the same products and pricing, but generates a small contribution to the charity of your choice (TPT of course!)

This is the most popular road ride in the area. The distance is 12 miles from Verdi to downtown Reno.

The section of the trail from Reno to its end at Vista Boulevard in Sparks is on a separate paved path. It's very gradual, nearly flat.

The trail ends at Larkin Circle, Sparks. Other open dirt sections are to the east by car.

This is a map of the Tahoe Pyramid Trail from Truckee to Verdi and from Verdi to Sparks. The map includes a mileage table between landmarks and a section on the paved path from Reno to Vista Boulevard in Sparks.
